To whom it may concern,

I am honored to take the time out my busy day to type this Letter of Recommendation for my good friend Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty-Seven. We have remained mutual friends for almost 3 years now, as our anniversary is celebrated in the month of July – In of which we both travel to meet and celebrate our successes and triumph. Unfortunately, it pains to know – due to a momentary setback that Sehvan is experiencing he is unable to make or annual tradition this year. I can confidently say Sehvan is a great man who is very dedicated and driven. Recalling when we both met, it was collective vibe and we instantly connected with each other.

Hence forth - when I was just growing in my culinary career thus striving to elevate in my craft. Sehvan challenged and motivated me continually pushing me to achieve my goals while sharing his personal experiences in how he made to where he is at in life. He is astounding and no one is as close like me and Sehvan are - I owe him a lot for that.

I had the distinct pleasure of touring USNS Mercy – Naval Hospital Ships where Sehvan was stationed on a few times because I was living in San Diego at the time we met. I was astonished once I got on that ship and personally saw the responsibilities, duties, and tasks that Sehvan is placed in charge of everyday – it made realize the tremendous sacrifices he puts forth every day. I was truly amazed, and it made me look up to him allot. Sehvan has the candid ability to inspire and mentor other people in life and he has a relentless attitude to never give up on anyone or anything. To achieve the level of success and to excel at what he does - takes a lot of blood, sweat and tears literally.

Big Dog Right There – lol!!

I love Sehvan and I consider him my brother as were family and I would do anything for him to get back on the right track. As I do believe that this minor setback is seen to him not as a detriment but as a steppingstone for Sehvan to achieve and become even greater. His family and I really miss him and want to see him back to doing what he does best – Rescuing and Saving Lives!!

To Whom It May Concern,

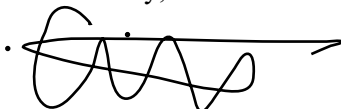

It is my pleasure to write a recommendation letter for Mr. Thirty Sehvan C. Forty-Seven from knowing him on personal/romantics level. I have known Sehvan personally for two years and have been his partner for six months thus it has been a privilege to see him develop personally, mentally, physically, spiritually, and professionally.

Sehvan is intelligent, diligent, and he has this contagious “Can-Do” attitude with the capacity which propels him to accomplish anything he sets his mind out to do. From the moment he wakes up he has “A Steadfast Definite Purpose” which echoes I can accomplish anything that I put my mind to”. Sehvan starts his day with a mantra – words of affirmations which solder everything that he desires and believes in. Which is one of the altruistic characteristics that sets him apart from everyone else. Thus, combined with consistency of an unwavering routine that hones his mind and prepares him for the day of success ahead.

Sehvan knows what it takes to overcome and adapt to changing and challenging situations, whether at work or personal. A deepening bond was further entrenched when he shared the story of his traumatic experience, his vulnerability and ability to communicate strengthened our relationship even more on an emotional level beyond words. Furthermore, he makes prudent decisions and judgement on what needs to occur long before it needs to be done. In addition to being one of a kind, Sehvan is well-liked and highly respected by many of his peers and subordinates. I experienced this firsthand and had the pleasure of being around Sehvan at the USNS Mercy – Navy Command Christmas Party in December 2019. I observed how respected he is by his co-workers, them continually looking to his leadership and for his advice on a personal or career aspects. He goes above and beyond for anyone he comes across no matter the scope, leading them on the path of success by providing necessary tools they need to get to the next level. I could not imagine anyone that encompasses and resonates leadership more than Sehvan does.

On a personal level. I have never met anyone in my life whom follow his pillars of life to a key: Confidence, Trust and Integrity are his core values. From the time he wakes up to the end of his day this is what he lives by. He inspires me to be a better person in life and improve in everything I do. Sehvan pushes me to be a better person mentally, spiritually, and professionally. Sehvan takes time to find ways to show me how to improve while also listening to my needs and wants, he provides techniques and different approaches that can be tailored to work best for me individually. Sehvan has made a tremendous impact in my growth in my journey to be better in many aspects of my life. Sehvan is one of the most, caring, loyal, organized, and precise individuals I know. I adore being around Sehvan, he adds value to everything he does. The time we share together – whether it be his positivity or his one of the kind mindsets on life he reminds me that anything is achievable. With his leadership skills, consistency of excellence and trustworthiness. I could not be feel more rewarded to have someone so special, and amazing in my life. Every day that I wake up I feel like I just won the lottery – I Love Him.

Sincerely,

Yulia Simonova

Re: Character Reference Letter for - Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty-Seven

To whom it may concern,

I have known Sehvan for about 20 years. In that scope our relationship has grown through celebrations, adversity, and challenges. Several years ago Sehvan was called upon to help his grandfather (a fellow veteran) – whose dementia had taken the turn for the worse and whom paternally raised him as his mother died when he was only 1.5 years old, Sehvan – was deployed to the Middle East for almost eighteen months yet he still took it upon himself to help his grandparents financially even despite the challenges he was facing downrange.

Although he is called upon to serve on ships in various parts of the world – he makes his presence known vehemently when visiting his family back home. As annually he continues to visit his grandmother for her birthday and assures to go with her to his Mothers tombstone to pay respects which she looks forward to every year.

Last year he flew three of his youngest nieces including his Aunt and myself to San Diego, California, there we experienced firsthand ship life and we toured the humongous and spectacular hospital ship the USNS Mercy - in which he was stationed on. It was visibly apparent how industrious and knowledgeable he is in every facet of his career thus respected by peers and associates. The girls were astonished that he risks his life as a Search and Rescue Officer to save people. To this day they constantly reminisce and rave about the: California Dream'n Vacation visit with their uncle in which he took time out of his busy day to take them to: SeaWorld – Balboa Park Museums and Safari Park.

He is man who is filled with solace and maintains true to his word and endeavors. I am much obliged he has requested my insight for a character reference.

Sincerely

Re: Character Reference Letter for – (My Nephew) Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty-Seven

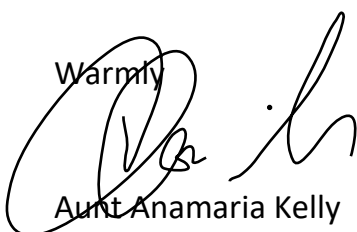

To Whom it May concern,

I am writing this letter to attest to the character of my nephew – with whom I am proud to say I played a monumental part in raising from a child and now to the man that he has grown into today. His ability to work with others to solve problems is intrinsic and more importantly to find solutions as well as seek out assistance is the hallmark which cultivates him in his career and well with his friends and family. Although he is deployed majority of the time throughout the year, he still plays a vital role in maintaining family responsibilities even while halfway across the world. Remaining involved with his family is something I could only fathom how difficult it must be as his grandparents dementia deteriorates coupled with the loss of a close cousin must have taken a toll – however my nephew still remains steadfast and resilient despite setbacks and change.

Our connection was strengthened as he felt comfort in sharing with me the true reason, he required a reference letter. I reminded him about - the spirit of togetherness and although I could not be there physically that I was there for him spiritually. Accepting accountability and responsibility for actions is herald and the true test of a person's character is the ability to bounce back from setbacks and tackle adversity which is something that I'm proud to say I have instilled in him since he was young – along with the compassion for others and tenacity to not accept defeat nor failure but use it as stepping to stone to propel forward.

I am honored my nephew sought my guidance and shared is temporarily setback as it allowed for us to be there for him as a family – he is truly missed & dearly loved.

To Whom It May Concern:

Thirty-Sehvan Forty-Seven is a name that is not easily forgotten; luckily for this young man, neither is his work ethic, contribution, communication skills, and exemplary performance! Needless to say, Sehvan aced the course but commending his academic rigor only addresses a fraction of his ability. As a professor with over 18 years active and reserve service in the US Army, I have had the opportunity to work with men and women from diverse backgrounds, training, and status. Personally, it took me 14 years to complete my doctorate goal. I mention these facts because, even within this scope of experience, dedication, and determination, Sehvan's drive, personality, and intellect stand out – ranked amongst the top achievers and best leaders I have been privileged to instruct.

Sehvan is a generous spirit of sheer resolve. No task is too daunting and he genuinely enjoys problem solving as well as working with others. In my MGMT 535 course entitled, "Theory and Application of Managerial Communications," I push my students to deliver clear, effective, and innovative solutions. I also demand they articulate these strategies and provide research evidencing their claims. Often, this presents a challenge for students in one degree or another. However, Sehvan proved talented in all aspects, from research to presentation. In reviewing his work, I interpreted a young man who was innately guided by enthusiasm for higher learning. In a collaborative environment, Sehvan emerged as a natural leader; selected by his peers, he professionally navigated a wealth of team obstacles, taking complete responsibility for team results. I was impressed by his tenacity and moved by his sensitivity. The team turned in perhaps the best project I have received in the past decade and I have no doubt that this is due to Sehvan's ability to unite a group, motivate them to excellence, and fill in the gaps as needed.

Having informed me of his intent to pursue a promotion, I happily took the opportunity to share my appreciation of his professionalism. Sehvan holds much promise. Often, the story goes that a student is full of potential – the end. In Sehvan's case, I see a young man dedicated to mining the gold of his own essence and I look forward to celebrating his accomplishments. I am confident that Sehvan is not only an organizational asset, but possesses the critical skills needed to skyrocket performance through theory and application. I would wish him luck but fortune is secondary to a willing and committed heart. Congratulations on this rare find!

Subj: LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION ICO MR. THIRTY-SEHVAN C.
FORTY-SEVEN

1. I'm writing this letter to provide a recommendation for Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty-Seven based on his strong work ethic he developed during my tour and a strong belief that he would excel as a Purser. I have served with Thirty-Sehvan for the last twelve months aboard USS EMORY S LAND, currently in port in Subic Bay, Republic of the Philippines. Thirty-Sehvan is vital during an operationally intense timeframe in which the ship provided submarine and surface ship support to the FIFTH and SEVENTH Fleet Areas of Responsibility.
2. As the XO of this integrated USN/MSC crew with more than 450 Sailors and Civilian Mariners, I relied on Thirty-Sehvan daily to provide the best possible service while inventorying and issuing Hazardous materials, a task he continues to do flawlessly. His hard work, dedicated efforts and most importantly positive attitude provided to the crews, both Navy and MSC, every time they interacted with Thirty-Sehvan has been invaluable. He clearly makes a positive impact on everyone he comes in contact with, making each crew member feel important while providing top notch customer service.
3. Thirty-Sehvan continues to work hard to make a difference in any endeavor throughout the ship. His dedicated efforts towards qualification are truly commendable. He would be a positive addition to any crew and would make a great Purser.

Subj: RECOMMENDATION ICO LS3 THIRTY-SEHVAN FORTY-SEVEN

1. LS3 Forty-Seven is one of the hardest working; detail oriented and dedicated workers at RNMC Norfolk. His hard work and initiative has helped to reduce man hours in sorting and dispatching of up to 10,000 lbs of mail weekly. He has saved an average of 1.5 hours per day with his ideas of how to get the job done. In addition, he also spends an average of 2 hours, each morning at the gym and has been the spear head in volunteer service. He has organized and participated in at least 2-3 off duty volunteer events a month. In addition to all his physical training and volunteer service, he also is diligently taking at least 1 college course per semester. He is always willing to help out where he can and is always looking out for his fellow sailor. He has my upmost recommendation to be selected as a U.S. Navy SEAL.

Very Respectfully,

To whom it may concern

My name is Dr. George Skena; I worked with Mr. Forty-Seven in Haiti, after the small country was devastated by natural disaster. My team, supervised by myself and under the head of the American Red Cross, worked with the United States Navy in intensive efforts to rescue, shelter, and treat thousands of displaced Haitians. During this stressful and challenging time, I met Sehvan. His commander allowed me to utilize his intelligence, determination, and clarity during this chaotic time. Working together, our teams delivered millions upon millions of relief services such as food, water, and medical supplies. I stayed partnered with Sehvan for a major stint of time, treating the citizens as his unit ensured their safety and survival.

In the States, it is a rare opportunity to experience such levels of humanity and solidarity. I was greatly moved by Sehvan's professionalism and personal connection with his unit, the disaster aid members, and most importantly, with the native peoples.

Having returned from Haiti forever changed, I am currently seeking a number of non-profit opportunities. Once I have firmly established my direction, I intend on actively recruiting Sehvan to join my team, although I would guess his loyalties are concrete in his service. He is a gentle man of decisive action marked by efficiency. I am proud to recommend Thirty-Sehvan Forty-Seven, a man as unique as his name, and wish him the absolute best of luck in all of his endeavors.

Cordially,

Dr. George Skena

It is my absolute privilege to recommend Thirty-Sehvan Forty-Seven for advancement to the Ships Officer Ranks. Having worked closely with Sehvan, I can confidently attest to his industrious approach to learning, logistics, and leadership. Sehvan's Supply Officer and Purser training demonstrates a clear understanding of Ships Officer service and competence. He is highly educated, holding a Bachelor degree in Technology Management and a Masters of Science in Logistics & Supply Chain Management. His expertise in these areas makes him exceptionally teachable, adaptable, and insightful. He has logged more than 60 OJT hours in just over two months. His preparedness differentiates his performance from the rest. He takes detailed notes to document his learning and requests training materials to ready himself between sessions.

Sehvan far outpaces the average trainee and has covered ShipCLIP, CLF, DHAMS, ISIS, One Touch, Web Salts, eRMS, Haystack, FedLog, HICSWIN, HMIRS and other supply automation and support tools; including ISM/SMS procedures/policies, DLR inventory management, OPTAR budgeting, and accounting system utilization. He is well versed in the technical and practical knowledge and skills required for the Junior Supply Officer and/or Purser position and routinely examples and trains others in key logistics tasks. He has the ability to complete his duties and add surplus value by using his education and experience to improve logistics accountability and quality. RE: Recommendation Letter for Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty-Seven

I had the distinct pleasure of having Sehvan as a student in my LGMT 536 Purchasing for Logistics and Supply Chain Management course during the March 2012 term. I found him to be a conscientious and detail oriented student who uniquely added to the depth of student discussion and excelled at critical analysis. He exhibited exceptional professional communication skills. Most of all, he had a natural ease in working with groups despite the challenges of telecommuting. His leadership capabilities were undeniable and he was able increase the standards of academic performance for the entire group. Furthermore, his sense of humor and candidness were magnetic. Student reviews praised him as being easy to work, considerate, and highly effective.

He received an A in the class. Completing an online graduate course and getting an A takes considerable discipline and motivation. Sehvan was always on-point in meeting deadlines and delivering content. I pride myself on challenging my students and am always refreshed when someone exhibits a strong desire to learn and to apply this learning. Throughout the course, Sehvan communicated with me regarding real-life work circumstances during which I found his insight and rationale remarkable. In my professional opinion, Sehvan is an excellent candidate for promotion to Logistics Supply Officer. He has the education, the experience, and the stamina needed to effectively lead a team as well as the individual push to continually improve his personal development. I congratulate Sehvan on all of his accomplishments and am certain that he is a stellar fit for your organization. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions.

From: Supply Officer, Ietitaia A. Sao, USS Emory S. Land (AS-39)

Subj: Purser Recommendation Letter for: Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty-Seven

There are those people who everyone seems to like and Sehvan is definitely falls in this category. This makes him a powerful leader as he routinely demonstrates within MSC/S-1 Cargo Division. His honesty and gentleness stand out. His confidence is balanced by his compassion and he has the ability to unflinchingly address any issue without alienating team members. As his direct supervisor within the past year, I personally have witnessed him staying past duty to assist others in learning new tasks and in coping with life's realities numerous times. Those who truly know Sehvan understand the value of a comrade, a friend, and a teacher all in one. He has a "No Fail" determination that refuses to give up and always finds a solution. This attribute fosters a sense of loyalty and commitment that are contagious.

Perhaps the greatest astound of Sehvan's qualities that I have experienced is his passion for learning. He tends to push farther and go deeper than the surface of any task or duty that I assign him. For Sehvan, learning is no end in itself. His character and work ethic easily separate him from those who are comfortable with mediocrity. I often tease him, saying that for every box he checks off the to-do list, he writes another three to make sure everything is completely covered. What I have learned from Sehvan is how to work smarter, not harder, on an individual and on a team basis. Furthermore, Sehvan challenges those around him to share this passion and reach their potential while simultaneously offering the support needed to take risks, seek opportunities, and give more.

I am delighted to extend my recommendation as you consider him for the very competitive Purser position, as well as honored that a man of such integrity would seek out my regard. His leadership abilities promise to greatly serve those who have the benefit of working both with and for him. I am positive that his character and performance will distinguish him from any competition as I would like to take this opportunity to express my personal appreciation for the contribution he has made to my division and command. He has my upmost recommendation for Purser.

I have had the pleasure of working with Mr. Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty- Seven for the last five months. During this time, he has provided invaluable support to the engineering department. He has assisted with the research and procurement of parts and provided feedback reports increasing COSAL allowance quantities. He has shown initiative and foresight by utilizing the Defense Re-utilization Marketing Office (DRMO) to fill shortages in the stock system and provided many upgrades throughout the ship, resulting in savings to the ships H6/D3 funding.

Sehvan is hardworking, energetic and willing to assist when called upon. On numerous occasions he has worked extended hours assisting with emergency part procurement to correct casualties. During initial load out of McLean he assisted SupShip Logistics Mgmt Specialist with loading COSAL parts throughout the ship. This included inventorying millions of dollars in parts and verifying correct amounts were received.

Mr. Seven is not only an exemplary employee, but he has trained other crewmembers on Ship clip. Throughout the course of the day, I see him instructing individuals on all aspects of Supply. He is an outstanding individual, worker and a true asset to Military Sealift Command; having only had the privilege of sailing with Sehvan for a short time, I consider him to be one of best Yeomen Storekeepers I have sailed with.

I am writing to express the unswerving integrity, discipline, and contribution of team member Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty-Seven - a man who exemplifies the rigorous commitment to excellence that the Military Sealift Command honors. I have had the professional pleasure of working closely with Sehvan as he has strategically positioned himself for greater and growing responsibility within the USNS William McLean unit. I have also had the pleasure of his company, marked by a respect for individual uniqueness and team collaboration, as well as a noted sense of humor that certainly works to his advantage with crewmembers of all ranks. In short, I highly recommend Mr. Forty-Seven given his past and current performance results.

Sehvan is an undeniable asset. His internal and external education are consistently applied in daily logistics operations. He is quick to utilize critical-thinking and theory, leading to creative problem-solving strategies with both human resource challenges and supply management hurdles. I have made it a personal goal to test his abilities and he continually proves that he possesses psychological, mental, and character strength able to handle all pressures that I have applied. As such, he has been given substantial responsibilities and privileges within our team. Training is an area where he excels; Another area of note is his interest in using his formal Logistic and Supply Chain Management education to benefit the ship. Recently, he cut our printer toner expenditure by 15% of his own initiative. While doing so, he introduced a number of our members to his procedure, indicating ways that these approaches could be employed in other capacities throughout the ship.

As a Supply Officer with years of Military Sealift experience, I have met many individuals of extraordinary character; I count Sehvan amongst the top of these men and women. I highly recommend Sehvan for promotion, understanding that he is capable of progressing even farther beyond his current achievement and impact. It is my hope that you will comprehend the value, heart, and intelligence that accompany his involvement in all that he attempts.

I wish him the absolute best in his personal and professional endeavors and congratulate any team to which he belongs.

Respectfully,

Subj: Character Reference Letter for Yeomen Storekeeper, Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty- Seven

I am very excited to write on behalf of Mr. Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty-Seven, recommending him for any position that he has set his will to achieve. During his recent Search and Rescue (SAR) training, Sehvan emerged as a leader. He worked extensively with a number of his classmates to better their program performance. Additionally, he actively recruited other potential SAR swimmers and conducted a training seminar on SAR School Tactics and Procedures given his previous, astute knowledge in this area. His demonstrated talent, drive, and reliability are central to the future leadership and attitude that guarantees maritime excellence for years to come.

In May 2011, just three days prior to graduation, Sehvan suffered a shoulder injury that resulted in his being medically dropped from the program; however, Sehvan did not settle for this outcome. Instead, he pushed forward, completing the SAR School San Diego with his team and with dignity. This perseverance indicates a man of solid character, grounded in commitment, integrity, and will power. My long term experience with Military Sealift Command has taught me how to decipher confidence from arrogance. Sehvan was able to effectively assess his personal capacity and select the most advantageous option in total alignment with Military Sealift Command and his personal values. I applaud his success in school and on the USNS William McLean where he predictably arisen as a leader, serving as the Primary Rescue Swimmer as well as an outstanding performance meeting the ship's rigorous SAR – ATT/INSURV training and inspection cycle

As we evolve as an institution, Military Sealift Command will need the best and brightest available. We will need individuals who integrate higher-level learning and technological sophistication with the traditional heart and honor of Military Sealift Command service. Sehvan exceeds these qualifications and is an advanced learner who's open-minded willingness to learn, engage, and contribute is vital to our organization's objectives. In my opinion, Sehvan's advancement capacity is unlimited. Much is to be expected from a man to whom much is given; and Sehvan willingly embraces this responsibility.

I am delighted to make this formal recommendation of Thirty-Seven C. Forty-Seven in recognition of his past success, his present example, and his future potential. Please contact me personally with any questions.

Respectfully,

To whom it may concern:

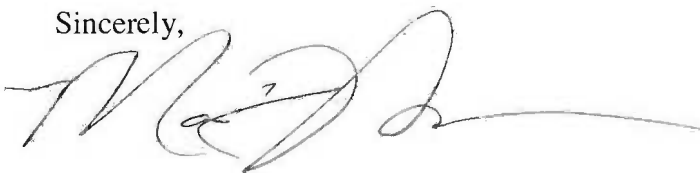

It is my pleasure to write this letter in support of Thirty-Sehvan C. Forty-Seven, a student of considerable insight and unabashed determination. I enjoyed the experience of getting to know Sehvan while teaching Organizational Theory through St. Leo University's continuing education program.

During my years as a professor, I have had the opportunity to work with a diverse group of students with a wide range of talents. However, Sehvan stands out from the rest due to his insatiable desire for learning and his proclivity to push beyond the status quo. From the start, Sehvan was eager to optimize his learning - embracing new concepts, and exceeding expectations throughout the entire course. In short, Sehvan sought to better himself as a professional by delving into the material and integrating this knowledge into his own career track.

I have never been let down by his work. What impresses me beyond his intellect and grasp of the applicability of the material are his interpersonal skills. Communication is a major component of the online classroom setting. Sehvan navigated this terrain with ease, developing a sense of camaraderie even as he disagreed with a student's position. This is crucial to successful teamwork and management. His enthusiasm was truly contagious!

I am lucky when I have the chance to work with such a diligent student. Sehvan is an articulate, talented, charismatic individual who promises great things for the organization he partners with. I wish him the absolute best of luck in all of his endeavors.

Sincerely,
